Presents

Water for Every Farm Using Permaculture

Labor Day Weekend, Sept. 5, 6 and 7, 2009, 9 AM - 4 PM

Learn proven techniques used around the world to increase the water capacity and efficiency of your home and farm.

Permaculture is a design science for creating sustainable human environments. With thousands of projects worldwide, Permaculture aims to create stable, productive systems that harmoniously integrate people and the land.

TOPICS INCLUDE: Creating long-term water security for your home and farm, earthworks, keyline plowing and an overview of Permaculture design.

Warren Brush is an internationally recognized Permaculture designer, teacher and lecturer with over twenty years experience. He is the co-founder of Quail Springs Learning Oasis and Permaculture Farm and the founder of True Nature Design, a consulting firm that works in North America, Africa, and other countries worldwide.

In addition to this course, Warren teaches the following classes, among many others: Permaculture Design Certification, Rainwater Harvesting Systems, Greywater Solutions, Drought Proofing, and Food Forestry.

Class Fee: $299.00 (includes lunch each day) Camping is available on site.
